

Bachelor's degree program Control and Expertise of Food Products (full-time courses, 4 years of study - 240 credits) is an accredited study program, established in 2004. This program aims to fulfill the increasing need for food engineering specialists. The dedicated teaching, practical activities, as well as the complexity of the curriculum have contributed to the reputation of this study program, and the job market feedback is positive. Graduates of this specialization obtain the qualification to work in any food business, occupying positions of engineers in the processing and agri-food products obtaining technology field, in the sector of expertise and control of these products, food quality and food safety management, implementation of food safety management systems, as well as food policies - food security and defence.